

ABSTRACT

Systems and methods are disclosed for selecting a value set associated with a set of parameters. A genetic algorithm generates at least one generation of speculative chromosomes that represent value set variations of a plurality of value sets. Each generation of speculative chromosomes are assigned a speculative count corresponding to a speculative chromosome generation. Validation is initiated once at least one speculative chromosome has a predetermined speculative count.